BALTIC SEA cuisine

Baltic sea region cuisine basic requirement is, that the food must be fresh, tasty, locally sourced and locally prepared.

The region is characterised by the fact that, during the spring and summer there are in the menu lighter dishes of fresh vegetables, herbs, berries, mushrooms and fish. During the late summer and fall harvests are preserved for the winter – preparing sauerkraut, marinating and salting cucumbers and mushrooms, cooking jams and compotes, freezing berries and drying herbs for teas. During the fall and winter, the cuisine becomes substantial with meat, vegetables, legumes, pickled, marinated and spicy dishes that are supplemented with warming and aromatic spices.

Local ingredients are important to many businesses all year round, although the seasons and the specific characteristics of the local area are also taken into account, and all this is reflected in the quality of the food on offer.

Nowadays, we are increasingly more interested in where our food comes from, who has produced it and how it has been made. Many head chefs challenge themselves to find increasingly more exciting ingredients to make their dishes even tastier, more natural and more appetising.

There are many different and distinctive eateries in all our countries that offer characteristic ingredients of the area and dishes inherent to our national cuisine, which have been modernized in an exciting manner. This is done by companies that offer simple traditional farm food as well as distinguished and internationally recognised restaurants that present high-quality culinary sensations.

There's a growing number of places popping up in each country that offer more than just great food. This means that new things are also taught and new knowledge provided - how to make food, where it grows etc.

Food workshop programmes with professional or amateur chef teach how to cook meals from locally grown ingredients and cooking is followed by enjoying the dishes made together. And for those who don't want to learn the secrets of cooking themselves, there is the option of ordering a nice lunch or dinner in an unusual setting, such as a forest. Visits to small-scale producers are also an experience.

Trends come and go, but the Baltic Sea region will forever be unique for its coastline, the four seasons, the unspoiled nature and top quality fresh produce. The centuries-long traditions behind cultivating exceptional products, hunting and fishing have created a presumption that anyone could be a great cook.

Good food is always an experience – a feast for taste buds and joy from enjoying one's company during a meal.

MEDUS KŪKA (HONEY CAKE)

a multi-layered cake with honey as its main ingredient.

Latvia

LATVIA has a wealth of culinary traditions, because the country is at the crossroads of Europe, and so influences from other nations have come from the East and the West over the course of centuries. Latvian cuisine is distinctly seasonal, because we have four seasons, and each of them offers specific products and tasty treats.

During the springtime, Latvians eagerly await the availability of birch juice. They grow green onions on windowsills. Onion skins are used to dye Easter eggs. Sorrel is sought out in gardens or meadows. Tarts with rhubarb are baked. The summer begins with wild and garden strawberries. Summer Solstice would not be Summer Solstice without caraway seed cheese and beer. Summer also involves new potatoes, cherries, tomatoes from the garden, ice cream, fresh honey, herbal teas and aromatic apples. Cranberry fool is whipped. Mushrooms are roasted and marinated. Mushroom hunting and fishing are nearly cult rituals or examples of meditation for Latvians. Meat is grilled over hot coals, and fish soup is cooked. Soured cream and dill can be added to nearly every dish. Pretzel-shaped pastry is baked for birthdays, and tarts are baked for weddings. People can pickles and jams, and they dry and freeze various goodies from the garden and the forest, because a long, hard winter is coming. During the autumn, Martin Day's rooster or goose is roasted in the oven, with apple cake or poppy seed pastry for dessert. Work sessions are held during the autumn, and potato pancakes are served. Fish, pork, sausages and even cheese can be smoked. Fresh butter is smeared on a slice of rye bread. Cranberries are used to produce lemonade. People buy and sell summer produce at annual markets. The Christmas table will groan under bacon pierogi, gingerbread, roast meats and sauerkraut. The Christmas table on New Year's Eve, people roast fish and put fish scales in their pocketbooks so as to ensure money in the new year. All of the peas on the table are eaten so as to ensure no tears in the coming year. People believe that at least nine dishes must be served on New Year's Eve to ensure that the next year will be a good one. Latvians are hospitable, and they will bring gifts when they come visiting and always give you one for the road when you're leaving.

Welcome!

LATVIAN FLAVOURS THAT YOU NEED TO TRY OUT ON YOUR NEXT TRIP

RUPJMAIZE (dark rye bread) has always been a staple of Latvian diet. For an added drop of sweetness, apple juice is often used in the recipe for Latvian dark rye bread. It is also used to make Rupjmaizes kārtojums (Layered rye bread), a traditional Latvian dessert made from rye breadcrumbs, blackcurrant or lingonberry jam, and whipped cream. Latvians make also a beverage, called kvass, from fermented dark rye bread.

JĀŅU SIERS (Jāņi cheese or Ligo cheese) is a Latvian sour milk cheese with cumin, traditionally eaten when the Latvian celebration the Summer Solstice. Nowadays the cheese has become one of the symbols of Latvian culture.

SPEĶA PĪRĀGI (Bacon buns) are Latvian oblong or crescent-shaped baked bread rolls or pastries filled with finely chopped fatty bacon cubes and onions. Smaller bacon buns are often prized for their daintiness and are considered the work of a skilled cook.

PELĒKIE ZIRŅI (grey peas) is a popular Latvian cuisine snack made from large grey peas. It is a traditional Christmas dish in Latvia.

AUKSTĀ ZUPA (summer cold soup) is a sweet cold soup made from beets and kefir (hence the vibrant pink colour). To add some richness to the dish, dill and spring onions are also found in auksta zupa.

LATVIAN STEW is a braised pork with dried apricots and brunes. It is a simple, comforting combination of tender, slow cooked pork shoulder, carrots, onions, apricots, and prunes that's warm and flavorful and even better the next day.

LOCAL FISHES from local fishermen: flounders, pike, sturgeon. If you look at Latvia's long coastline, it shouldn't come as a surprise to you that Latvians like eating fish and also offer it to the guests.

BIEZPIENMAIZE (Latvian cheesecake) is a baked cheesecake, where yeast dough is for the base and cottage cheese for the topping. Usually it would contain sultanas and would be served cut in rectangles.

STRAWBERRIES WITH MILK (and also other berries like blueberries, raspberries) is a simple dessert that you just have to try.

MEDUS KŪKA (Honey cake) is a multi-layered cake with honey as its main ingredient. It also has a creamy filling made from sour-cream between the layers. It is a sweet and delicious treat that goes very well served with an afternoon tea.

BEER from local breweries - excellent taste.

APPLE CIDER (and also made from other fruits and berries).

At the end of the day try RIGA BLACK BALSAM (Melnais Balzāms), a liqueur which comes in several flavours, the most popular of which being blackcurrant and cherry.

Estonia

Estonian cuisine is a delightful mix of hearty dishes and has developed on the basis of traditional farm and estate cooking and offering, later following the traditions of cooking in cities. Use of domestic and local, incl. organic, foodstuffs is typical of Estonian food culture.

Different seasons are clearly expressed on Estonian food table. Besides fresh and lighter summer and autumn dishes, preserves and meat dishes are prevailing on food table in winter and spring. Spring is the season of fish dishes, summer is the season of berries and autumn is the time for mushroom and game dishes.

Welcome!

ESTONIAN FLAVOURS THAT YOU NEED TO TRY OUT ON YOUR NEXT TRIP

RUKKILEIB (rye bread/dark bread) - rye is a very popular ingredient and rye bread is worth eating every chance you get. Estonians make also a beverage, called kali, from rye bread. And for dessert lovers definitely leivasupp (bread soup) – creamy and sweet soup, that is usually made with soaked and mashed bread, raisins, fruit juice, cinnamon and sugar.

Räim (Baltic dwarf herring) is a subspecies of the Atlantic herring and is leaner than its Atlantic counterpart. Look for it on nearly every menu, prepared in a variety of ways.

KILU (a marinated spicy sprat fillet) is delicious with rye bread and occasionally complemented by poached or hard-boiled eggs, green onions, and fresh herbs.

KOHUKE (Estonian curd snack) which is offered in all kind of flavours, from vanilla to cheesecake and blueberry.

KAMA, a flour mixture which contains barley, oat, rye and pea flour. You can find kama mixed into all kind of desserts, but most commonly, you'll see it mixed with buttermilk or kefir.

VERIVORST (Blood sausage mixed with barley) may seem strange at first, but if you don't try it, you don't know if you will like it. It is traditional Christmas food.

MULGIPUDER, a unique porridge, consists of mashed potatoes and barley and makes for an excellent side dish. As a main dish it is often mixed with bacon and onions.

MULGIKAPSAD (Sauerkraut with Pork and Barley), which are cooked slowly, until the sauerkraut and barley are tender. It tastes much more and better than you'd imagine when looking at the short list of ingredients.

ROSOLJE (Mixed Beetroot Salad) is a „fuchsia-colored” salad from Estonian cuisine. It is prepared with pickled herring and bite-sized pieces of beets and potatoes, all coated in a refreshing, creamy dressing. With rosolje, all of the ingredients are mixed in the same bowl. This gives it plenty of different flavors and textures.

SÜLT (Meat Jelly) is a dish traditionally made from a mixture of meat, trotters, hocks, rind and other ingredients that have been cooked for several hours and cooled afterwards, forming a jelly. A traditional Christmas and wedding food served as an appetizer or as a meal itself.

HERNESUPP (Pea Soup) with yellow dried peas and smoked pork is a classic fastelavn festival food. Making this soup requires a bit of effort and patience, but the result is enjoyable.

GAME MEAT - delicious wild boar meat is definitely worth a try, and for the more adventurous, there are also a couple of restaurants serving bear meat.

At the end of the day try a rum-based liqueur VANA TALLINN (Old Tallinn), which is one of Estonia's hallmark products. Although the recipe is kept secret, some of the flavorings include citrus oils, cinnamon, and vanilla.

KILU (A MARINATED SPICY SPRAT FILLET)

KOHUKE
(ESTONIAN CURD SNACK)

MULGIPUDER

ÅLAND PANCAKE

Pancake of semolina or rice, served with a snaps.

Åland, Finland

For Ålanders food is exceptionally important. With respect for nature we aim to live according to the season and prepare a lot by hand. The fresh sea air, fertile soil and long growing season allows for a high quality and unique aromas – difficult to find anywhere else.

Back in the day people living in the archipelago had to preserve the little they had. That way of thinking still lives on and, today, is the foundation for what is considered sustainability.

A hundred years ago, Ålanders were experienced seafarers who were used to sailing around the seas of the world. On their travels the seamen experienced new flavours and returned back home with new spices, ingredients and influences. You can still see traces of this heritage until this day. New influences are brought in innovatively from foreign cuisines!

ÅLAND FLAVOURS THAT YOU NEED TO TRY OUT ON YOUR NEXT TRIP

ÅLAND PANCAKE - in the old days in the archipelago, serving pancake with a snaps was a way to lure passing boats to stop by at the jetty to share local gossip as well as world news. Still today, Ålanders and foreigners gather around the Åland pancake and most local cafes and restaurants have it on their menu. When it comes to the question of semolina or rice, the choice is yours. It could be noted, however, that semolina is actually produced locally whereas rice has to be imported.

WATERFOWL - roasted waterfowl, waterfowl soup, "råddarkrâpå" - the local dishes based on waterfowl are quite a few and deeply rooted in our society. For a long time, fresh waterfowl was a sure sign of spring but today spring hunting is illegal according to the EU. As a result, the most frequent species have changed from eider and scoter to goldeneye and tufted duck and in the autumn flocks of mallards passing through the archipelago on their way south. Traditionally the bird is plucked, then seared over a fire of elder wood to give it the right flavor. The seasoning usually consists of bay leaves, juniper berries, allspice and a lot of onions. The dish is often served with lingonberries, unless it is a soup.

SUNDSPIROG - also called Bomarsundspirog or Russian Minced Meat Pasty, is clear evidence of Russian presence in Åland. Finland, and therefore Åland too, was under Russian rule between 1809 and 1917 and thousands of Russian soldiers were temporarily housed in local farms during the construction of the Bomarsund Fortress in Sund. The Russian Minced Meat Pasty, or Sundspirog, is wheat dough stuffed with fried minced meat, cooked rice and boiled eggs. In other words, real food for a lumberjack. Or should we say real food for a fortress builder?

ÅLAND BLACK BREAD was originally intended for long sea voyages and it takes several days for the bread to get its dark colour. After baking, the loaves are left in the stove to cool and are then wrapped in wool blankets. Rye, sourdough and in some cases sour milk are the main ingredients but time and handicraft decide the outcome.

Black bread will keep for a long time and is therefore an excellent provision when heading for fishing communities or going on trading trips to nearby places. When the bread was eventually too dry to eat, it could be boiled in water to make a porridge, which is called "Beso" in the eastern parts of the archipelago.

Even today, black bread is a must-have in most local homes both on weekdays and during holidays. It is served with butter, pickled herring or other types of pickled fish and different kinds of sauces.

HERRING "How many pans a person?" is an old way of measuring when it comes to herring. Whether you prefer filets or whole herring with only the head and intestines removed, is a question of taste. A whole herring, tail and all, takes but a few minutes to prepare, which is a true sign of fine quality. It is also easier to tell how fresh a fish is if it is intact. Puritans claim that a herring should not be stored for more than an hour or so and that it should move and flap in the pan to taste the best. Fried herring is often served with mashed potatoes, lingonberries, pickled cucumber or pickled beetroots.

SMOKED FISH

tines removed, is a question of taste. A whole herring, tail and all, takes but a few minutes to prepare, which is a true sign of fine quality. It is also easier to tell how fresh a fish is if it is intact. Puritans claim that a herring should not be stored for more than an hour or so and that it should move and flap in the pan to taste the best. Fried herring is often served with mashed potatoes, lingonberries, pickled cucumber or pickled beetroots.

SMOKED FISH is something of a national sport in Åland and summer cottage without a fishnet and some kind of smoker is quite rare. In Åland smoked fish usually means that it is hot-smoked, most commonly using alder and juniper, two species of wood that are also predominant in the barren archipelago of the Åland Islands. The Ålanders themselves mostly fish and smoke perch, whitefish and flounder but in local shops and markets you can always find smoked and seasoned trout or salmon.

CREAM FILLED DONUT - in 1965, the Cream Filled Donut was introduced in Åland and today it has its given place in our society. It all started thanks to baker Hjördis Karlsson. The idea to fill a long donut with fresh whipped cream was something Hjördis Karlsson picked up from Sweden. The very first cream filled donuts were baked at Lilla Hembageriet, a nowadays torn down yellow wooden house in Nygatan in central Mariehamn. The donuts became so famous that they were flown to Helsinki to be sold at Stockmann department store. The only change to the original donut is that today there is also a slightly smaller version. Why change something perfect? The question of whether there should be apple puree or raspberry jam under the whipped cream is perhaps the biggest controversy.
